SUNDANCE — Writing a master plan to consolidate public and private development activities in Provo Canyon will start as soon as financing for the project can be organized and could be completed by June.

Public and private groups who have interests in the canyon met at Sundance Resort on Wednesday to discuss goals.

Sundance Resort has been working with officials from Provo, Utah County, Orem and state agencies to produce a canyon master plan everyone can agree on.

So far, the blend of private and public interests is working, and Sundance representative John Lear said everyone involved in the project agrees the canyon must be preserved.

"Everyone agrees that Provo Canyon is an asset to Utah County and the people who live there," Lear said. "If we are going to preserve what we have, we are going to have to do it now, and that is the purpose of this group."

Lear said the biggest problem with the canyon has been that no one group or agency has total control over it.

"It is going to take a unified effort to preserve what we do have," he said. "Our feeling here at Sundance was that unless we all came together we would lose our assets in the canyon."

Lear said all the groups who have an interest in the canyon have development plans. The idea is to blend all those plans into one.

"We also have the problem of funding for this project," he said. "The idea is not to do everything at once, and that will help."

Lear said there is some urgency because the Utah Department of Transportation needed to finish plans for widening the Provo Canyon highway. He said the Heber Creeper and other private interests in the canyon also needed to work on plans.

Lear presented a proposed plan for the canyon. The plan included the development of the Provo-Jordan River Parkway parallel to the Heber Creeper railway tracks.

"We would like to work closely with the UDOT people and have places for parking along the river," Lear said. "We would like to see New England-style train sheds so people can drive up the canyon, park and then cross over the road to a picnic area or to the train."

He said the plan considers transportation, watershed, scenic and recreational aspects of the canyon.

Public and private representatives who were at Wednesday's meeting were divided into five groups to go over the plan and make recommendations at a May 30 meeting.

"Time is very important, and we would like to get the plan finalized as soon as possible," Lear said. "Then we can coordinate our plans with the other plans in existence and begin working on funding."

Lear said he hopes the final plan will be so exciting that public and private groups will be more than willing to invest money in it.

"What we will have is a canyon full of choices," he said. "Time is important and we can't afford to lose what we have."

The proposed plan would preserve open space in the canyon, develop view areas along the highway, enhance landscaping, improve present facilities and preserve the historical aspects of the canyon.

The plan would support plans by Provo city to develop an 18-hole golf course in the canyon and plans by the state to build a marina at Deer Creek Reservoir.
